

Who is the poorest person in the world? Meet Jerome Kerviel

JEROME KERVIEL

How Jerome Kerviel became the “poorest person in the world”

Jerome had been working with a leading banking firm as a junior level derivatives trader, earning about US$66, 000 every year. His hard work at Societe Generale (SocGen) saw him accumulate a whopping US$73 billion stock index futures position in the wake of 2008.

Investing in the Eurostoxx pan-European stock index futures contracts (30 billion Euros), Germany's DAX futures (18 billion euros), and London's FTSE futures (2 billion euros) was never a good idea.

It later emerged that Jerome suffered the loss deliberately in an attempt to mask his illegal dealings at the company. According to a report released by SocGen, Jerome had been involved in a series of trade frauds.

JEROME HAS GONE DOWN IN HISTORY AS A MAN BEHIND THE WORLD'S MOST MASSIVE TRADING FRAUD. BEHIND HIS COSTLY SUITS, JEROME IS NOW THE WORLD'S POOREST MAN CONSIDERING HE OWES SOCGEN MORE THAN $63 BILLION.
