Best Wedding Rings For Mechanics Buying Guide

Now that we have shown you the best unisex durable wedding rings for mechanics that are available, how do you go about choosing the right one?

All of the rings we have chosen are made from durable materials and will be suitable for mechanics to wear to work. So you can focus on choosing a ring that suits your individual style.

The first thing to consider is what width you would like your ring to be. If you have small or thin fingers then you might want a thinner ring, so it doesn't look too big on your finger.

Alternatively, if you prefer an edgier fashion style then a chunky ring might work best for you.

The next thing to think about is color - do you want a traditional silver or gold color? Or would you prefer something a bit different like black or rose gold?

What will best suit the clothes that you tend to wear and the other jewellery that you have?

Once you have chosen the width and the color, it's time to consider the finish. A matte or brushed finish is quite modern and stylish, but the highly polished finish is timeless and classic.

If you want something a bit different you can also choose a beveled edge.

The final thing to decide is whether you would prefer a plain ring, or an inlay. The opal, galaxy or shell inlays are very eye-catching and will make your wedding ring a real statement piece.

But, a simple design is just as elegant and stunning.

If you are struggling to decide between two rings, you can also compare their presentation. Do you want a nice velvet ring box to use on the wedding day or to store it in, or would you prefer a felt pouch?

The most important thing to remember when choosing a wedding ring is that you are going to be wearing it every day, so make sure you choose what you like best.

It's no good choosing something you think other people will approve of when they aren't the ones wearing it and looking at it every day!

Frequently Asked Questions

How To Measure Your Ring Size?

When buying a ring online it is important that you know your ring size to make sure it will fit correctly. To measure the perimeter of your finger to work out your ring size, you will need a non elastic piece of string or thread.

Wrap it around your finger- not too loose and not too tight- just how you would want your ring to fit. Make a mark on the string, or cut the string, at the point where it crosses over.

Next, you will need to stretch out the string and measure it alongside a ruler or tape measure.

You can also use a strip of paper instead of string or thread. Compare the perimeter of your finger to the size guide to find out your ring size.

Remember that your fingers can swell up in the heat or across the day, so it might be best to measure your finger several times in one day before settling on a size.

Why Choose a Tungsten Carbide Wedding Ring?

Tungsten Wedding Bands are the newest trend in jewellery. Tungsten is known as one of the hardest metals in the world, and retains its color and shine after many years of use.

Tungsten carbide is roughly 10 times harder than 18k gold, 5 times harder than stainless steel and 4 times harder than titanium. This makes it a perfect material for durable and scratch resistant wedding bands.

Tungsten is alloyed with steel which means it is tough, but stable at high temperatures so it is able to be crafted into beautiful shapes and designs.

The original color of Tungsten is gray, so other color options are likely plated.

Tungsten Carbide jewellery retains its shape, even if it takes a heavy impact.

The rings have a good weight to them because of the density of the metal. It is also a hypoallergenic metal. All of the benefits of Tungsten Carbide come at a very reasonable price.

How to care for your wedding ring? Once you have chosen your Tungsten Carbide wedding band, you will need to know how to look after it to maintain its attractive appearance.

To clean your Tungsten Carbide wedding band, mix warm water with a few drops of mild soap. Try to avoid using an ultrasonic jewelry cleaner and keep your ring away from harsh chemicals.

Whilst the ring will be durable, it is best to avoid your ring impacting on any hard substances where possible. When you aren't wearing your ring, store it separately from other jewellery.
